TO DIE BY ELECTRICITY.

darla Barberi, the Italian Girl. Convicted of Murder in the First Degree and Sen-tenced to Die by Electricity-Will be the First Woman to Die in the Electric Chair. New York, July 18.-Maria Barberi, he Italian girl convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of her bootblack lover, Domenico Cataldo, after he had betrayed her under promise of marriage, was brought before Recorder Goff in the court of general sessions this morning to be sentenced to death by electricity.

The recorder sentenced her to be put o death by electricity during the week beginning on August 19.

The fact that, if the sentence is carried out, the Italian girl will be the first woman to die in the electric chair and the second woman to suffer the death penalty in this state within a period of seventy-five years, attaches peculiar interest to the case.

About the criminal courts to-day the impression held that the young woman would never suffer the death penalty that her sentence would be commuted to life imprisonment or to a long term of years behind the bars.

Maria Barberi slept more soundly last night than on any night since she was found guilty of the murder. She arose at 7 o'clock and ate a light breakfast. Shortly afterwards she received visits from her lawyers, Evans and O'Reilly, and Mrs. Foster, the tombs missionary The woman gave way during the early morning to violent fits of weeping

The Cointesse di Brazza Savorgnan who is staying at the Hotel Savoy, sent a large box of reses to her. These, however, were not allowed to go into the prison. At 10:30 o'clock Recorder Goff entered the court room. At that time the court was crowded. Sitting quietly on the rear bench were the father and brothers of the girl. The Rev. Father Ferretti of the Church of the Transfiguration, who has been acting as the girl's spiritual adviser, was also in court. The Comtesse di Branza Savorgnan was on a front beach watching every proceeding of the court with interest. She has retained Lawyer Fred House as counsel for the convicted woman. Shortly before II o'clock Maria was taken from her cell by two deputies.

was weeping violently and trembling from head to foot. Mrs. Foster was with her doing all in her power to help the woman bear up under the ordeal. There was a long list of pleas heard by the recorder, so that there was a delay in passing the senence. The girl remained on the bridge until the calendar was cleared.

At 11:15 Clerk Carroll called "Maria

Barberi to the bar." Sheriff Tamsen tiptoed in. He was to receive the death warrant . Leaning on the arm of Mrs. Foster the girl entered. She was attired in black and wore a great flower-covered hat. Her eyes were half closed and were marked with great round black The girl reached the bar and then

"What's your name?" "Maria Barberi," she replied faintly. Your age?" Twenty-two," she murmured.

weight of evidence was against her, and she had been found guilty of murder in the first degree. Lawyer Evans arose and asked for a postponement of sentence. Lawyer House followed with an appeal that the arrest of sentence he granted. He wished, he said, to get at all of the records. Recorder Goff denied the motion, saying that he was compelled to eliminate his personal feeling of sympathy for the unfortunate defendant, and had to do his duty. He felt that the girl had received a fair trial, and every possible aid had been given her in her defense, and the verdict had been only such as any just jury could find. If there had been errors made they would be righted by the court of ap-peals. To his mind a stay of sentence would not aid the girl's case in the elightest. Mr. House made another appeal for an arrest of judgment, but his motion was denied.

"I will, however," said the recorder, "allow you to make your motion for a new trial now, and then file your reasons later, as if sentence had not been Maria Barberi, who, through this discussion, which lasted half an hour, had been sitting apparently oblivious to all around her, with her head on Mrs. Foster's shoulder, weeping at intervals, was called to the bar.

Mrs. Foster and a court attendant supported her as she stood at the railing. The girl seemed to neither hear nor understand anything that passed. Then the recorder began a lengthy speech, which was translated sentence by sentence. Some of the spectators murmured against prolonging the ordeal of the girl, who, although in an almost fainting condition, was forced to stand at the bar as the recorder talked, The recorder said: "Maria Barberl, you were indicted and tried for the crime of murder in the first degree." The interpreter shouted this in the ear of the trembling girl. Then the recorder continued: "A jury of more than average intelligence, after most careful selection, was by your own choice put in the jury box. At your trial everything that could with reason and propriety be done by coun-sel for you was done. The evidence produced, mainly undisputed, was overwhelming in proof of your guilt." The girl swayed to and fro, supported from falling by the arm of Mrs. Foster. It seemed as if she were almost faint-in view of the evidence, have been considered. By that verdict law and jus-tice have been vindicated, and beyond that nothing can be expected at the ar of justice.

"Nothing now remains but for me pass sentence upon you. Sarberl, you have been found guilty of murder in the first degree in killing one Dominico Cataldo." The recorder picked up the death war-cant and read: "It is ordered that within ten days from the present date the sheriff of New York or his agents transmit you into the custody of the warden of the state prison at Sing Sing, and that rom that time you be kept in solitary confinement, allowed to see no one but the keepers of the prison, your family r a priest or minister of the gospel and your lawyers until the week beginning on August 19, 1895, when the warlen of the state prison is commanded o inflict upon you the death penalty y electricity." These lengthy and formal sentences were translated a few words at a time to the prisoner. The girl had stopped vesping and her eyes were closed. seemed to hear nothing and to be on he verge of total collapse.

At the completion of the sentence she sank into a chair. Everybody thought that here her ordeal for the time was over and that she would be led away. Instead, however, Sheriff Tamser was commanded to stand forth. He stepped in front of the clerk's desk and then Clerk Carroll read the death warrant slowly. The proceedings were thus lengthened another five minutes.

Then the girl was led away. As she reached the door her mother, a middle-aged Italian woman, rushed out of the rowd toward her. Her brother and father followed. The deputies pushed them back, and the girl was at last led out of the room. Then her family were allowed Lawyer House asked the recorder to allow the girl to remain in the Tombs onger than ten days, until the motions for a new trial were formulated. The recorder denied the request.

THE BAPTIST CONVENTION. en Thousand Persons at the Opening

Meeting. Baltimore, July 18.—The delegates and visitors to the fifth international convention of the Baptist Young People's union of America continued to arrive throughout the night and early morning hours, until, at 10 o'clock, there were 10,000 coogregated in the mammoth tent located at the Madison avenue entrance o Druid Hill park. The interior of the big tent presented gay appearance, with myriads of American flags, Baptist union flags and English flags hanging from every post and pole in the place. Across the entire ength of the choir gallery is a broad piece of each of the four colors that were selected to represent the four sections into which the international work of the union is divided-green for the south, red for Canada, blue for the states west of the Mississippi and gold for those east of the Mississippi. From the top of the large pole just in front of the main stand scores of ribbons of these colors were festooned down to the speaker's rostrum. An enormous chart containing a list of 205 schools and colleges in this country that are controlled by the Baptis church occupies a conspicuous position over the choir stand, while just in from of it is suspended another large charshowing the home and reading courses that are carried on by the union. The platform, from which the speakers addressed the audience, has a capacity for 200 persons. These seats were occupied by ministers. Back of this platform six tiers of seats gave accommodution to a chorus of 500 voices and an orchestra of fifty pieces. The chairs in the main auditorium are arranged in theater fashion, giving those seated in the rear a chance to see and hear what is going on. Devotional exercises were led by the Rev. C. A. Hobbs, D. D., of Delavan, Wis. His reference to the warm hearts and warmer sun of the southern city called forth the first applause. As Dr. Hobbs declared the convention open for business a late delegation from Wisconsin marched into the tent and own the side aisles, singing "Maryland, My Maryland."

SIMPLE BUT EFFICACIOUS. How to Destroy the Elm Leaf Beetle-Take Care of the Elms. To the Editor of the JOURNAL AND COURIER Many citizens of this city have elms n their property or adjoining it which cannot receive the treatment which the elty has undertaken.

A simple and very effective treatment for the alm leaf beetle, which observation and experiment justify this station in recommending, is the following: Scrape the trunks carefully. COLLISION ON ELM STREET. Iwo Electric Cars Ran Into Each Other

Yesterday Morning.

A head-on collision between two electric cars occurred on Elm street, near Church street, early yesterday morning. One car was on the Edgewood avenue line and the other was on the Dixwell avenue line. The Edgewood avenue car was coming down Elm street while the Dixwell avenue car had just turned the corner from Church street into Elm stroct. The Edgewood avenue car was running at so rapid a rate that the motorman, Joseph Butler, could not ontrol it and it crashed into the Dixwell avenue car, but the only damage done was to break a brace under the Edgewood avenue car and to slightly cratch the forward end of the Dixwell venue car.

Both cars were well filled with pas sengers, who were very much terrified and all were shaken up. Several pasingers jumped from both cars into the street, but no one was seriously injur-

After the collision the officials of the New Haven Street Railway company held an investigation into the facts of the case and having decided that it was Je to the negligence of Butler for running his car too fast at such a danger ous point, discharged him from the employ of the company. Butler, who lives at 39 Mill street, claims that the colision was caused by slippery rails.
